Nature is a wonderland of beauty and grace
Where birds sing their melodies and soar in space
They change with the seasons, adapting and thriving
From spring to winter, they keep on surviving

In spring, they welcome the flowers and the sun
They build their nests and have some fun
They lay their eggs and watch them hatch
They feed their young and guard their patch

In summer, they enjoy the warmth and the light
They fly in the sky and explore the height
They find their mates and sing their songs
They join in flocks and get along

In autumn, they prepare for the cold and the dark
They gather their food and store their lark
They migrate to warmer lands and say goodbye
They follow their instincts and don't ask why

In winter, they endure the snow and the frost
They seek for shelter and count the cost
They fluff their feathers and stay together
They brave the storm and wait for better

Nature, birds, and the seasons are a cycle of life
They show us the beauty and the strife
They inspire us to cherish and to grow
They teach us to adapt and to flow.